

BULB LOG 16.....20th April 2011

Fritillaria meleagris

We have just returned from the International Conference in Nottingham where we had a lovely time meeting up with many of you. Now we are preparing for a host of visitors who are touring Scotland visiting some gardens so I have little time again this week to say much in words but again I hope the pictures speak for themselves.

Fritillaria imperialis stands stately in the garden – these are seed raised plants and seem to be flowering rather well now they are seven years old. Look carefully and you will see that the stem on the right has a double tier of flowers.

I have not shown many Fritillaries this year as many came when there was so much else to show in the bulb log so I will make a series of small pictures to show some of those that are flowering or have been in the last short while.

amana

amana

graeca

montana

bithynica

carica

pinardi

acmopetela

grandiflorum

reuteri

amana

kotschyana

michaelovskyi

oliveri

pallida

yuminensis

argolica

affinis

latakienensis

lusitanica

affinis

oblique

davisii

reuterii

amana

moggridgei

tubiformis

burnatii

montana

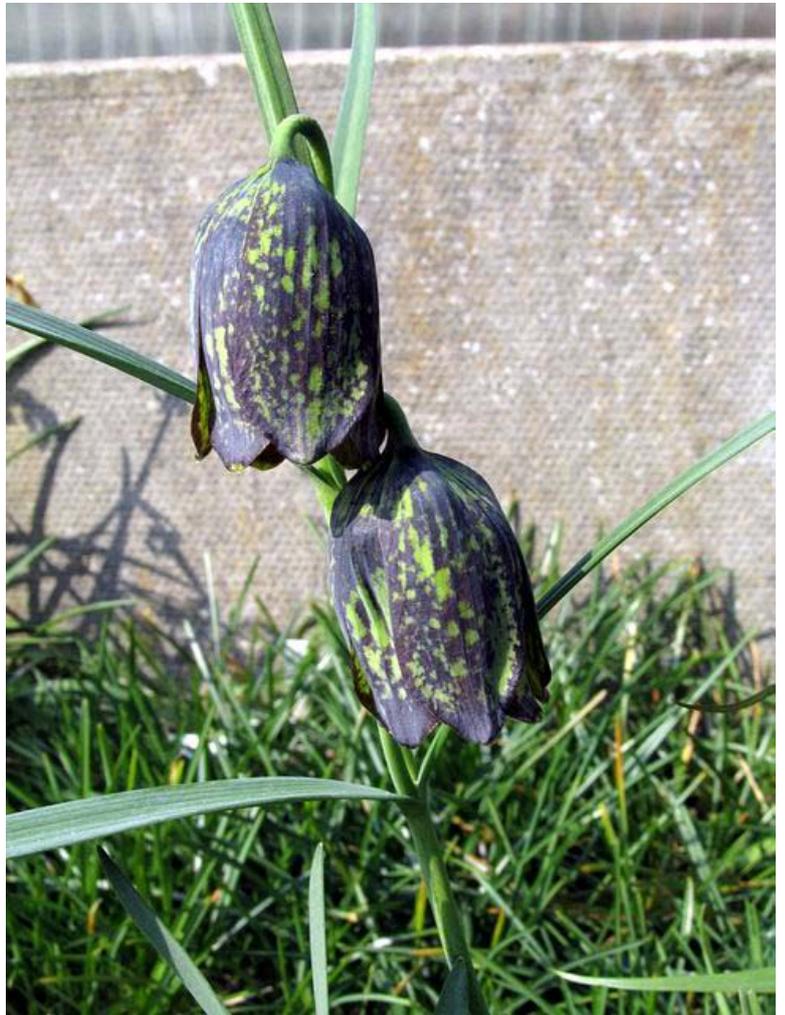

meleagris

Fritillaria moggridgei

Fritilartia cirrhosa

Fritillaria pallidiflora

Tulip bed

This narrow south facing bed has become the home for many of our tulips and the extra warmth trapped by the white wall seems to suit them well. These are a few in flower and there are many more buds to open.

Enjoy the pictures – normal bulb log service will resume next week – I suspect that some Erythroniums may be included.